

NAME: Dylan Marsh

Working practices and legislation

4.1 (pt 2) Demonstrate good health and safety practice when working on film productions

How will/did you apply good health and safety practice when making your film?	Make sure you cover all the possible opportunities of someone getting injured or hurt. you can do this when completing the risk assessment form in pre-production. make all the rooms which seem dangerous when filming or on set.
Add your risk assessment and explain why this is important.	a risk assessment is important because it is a way for everyone working on set to know if there what all the possibilities of someone not going through the some situation which might cause an accident. make sure everyone knows how to deal with a problem or accident which happens.